Did it ever feel just right to you have you ever wondered who we are.
Pleasures in life are far and few do you ever yearn for something more.
This life it ain't big enough it ain't fair enough sometimes we don't get to shine.
I remember feeling owned by you knowing I could never make you mine.
Don't tempt me now I'm falling too much water under that bridge.
The world it ain't the same without you now it keeps turning.
Bind and gag my consciousness please leave me no room to breath.

Restraints can't bind the heart that feels you don't feel the same for me.
Like a paid professional cruel to the bone is my pain what gets you off.
My willingness to suffer beneath your hand as long as you don't stop.
And all that I once took for granted now slapped me in the face
fallen from your favor the bitter flavor of disgrace.
Distraction staring at me live my life in the surreal in the new awareness I was shown a new suffering I feel.
