"Armistice Days"

To be what you know or know what you say
To roll on and fight or join the armistice days
Take a break from the providence of yesterday
The sting of this torture that you've been in Resuscitation of every synthetic minute you engaged All the things that you saw needed to be changed? A tangible outcome could have been achieved in the past

The unattainable probability that never passed

Will you join me in this peace?
We'll be like soldiers sharing tea at Christmas
And we can just sit and talk (About what doesn't matter)
As long as we drop the malice we've been taught

Let's continue to breathe this way
Never lose these Armistice Days

As the world opens up beyond the fascination we become
Something more than what's listed on the box
And as let our eyes absorb this new light
We can readjust our focus of our fight

Just remember to breathe

Let's continue to breathe this way
Never lose these Armistice Days

Will you join me in this peace?
We'll be like soldiers sharing tea at Christmas
And we can just sit and talk (About what doesn't matter)
As long as we drop the malice we've been taught

Let go of all those fascinations that you've become
We are something more when we are done
The real world is only what's right now
The weight of the past only holds us down
