As they reached the mountain hall there was a great gate blocking their way to shelter.

Damn! All is lost. So this would be the end of their journey? They had failed in their quest, and Kail would be lost forevermore.

No, wait! Someone was opening the gate, and was letting them in. "Quick!!!
Get inside. Here you will be safe from all evil." Outside the gate demonic voices screamed in rage knowing that their prey just had fooled them.

But where were they? The old man in front of them looked silently at them for a while, and then he said: "You have entered the home of the Muhrml people, and you are most welcome. My name is Darog. We know all about your quest, and if there's anything we can do to help, then please let me know."

"If it is in your powers, maybe you could help us find a path that would lead us through this mountain and to the dark land, without being discovered by the dark army?"

"Of course!" Darog said, "I'll give you our best tracker to show you the way. He is by far the best man we've got so you don't have to worry."

With torches in hand they followed Darog down to the secret passage that would lead them to the dark side. But he reminded them not to be off guard.

There were all sorts of dangers waiting in the dark and one mistake could have devastating results.

Deep in the mountain in darkness and stones
Their kingdom lies there unknown Where it's been safe from the dangers and wars
No evil can come through their doors

Oh, they promised to help us all They would guide our way To the end of our goal

So into the dark, on paths no one knows He guides our way through the dangers Beware of your steps, one fault can bring death
And all your work in vain
So follow his steps because he knows the way That leads us safe through the shadows
So don't hesitate, just do as he says
And we all will be safe in the end

Many hours has gone since we left In darkness, it feels like a year But he gives us courage and strength to move on Don't worry, well make it you'll see

Oh, this road just seems so long
But we all came this far, and we will not stop now

So into the dark...

So into the dark...
