written by Don Von Tress

She's the promise of pearl in a pool of heartache

She's the perfect truth wrapped in little white lies

Like the wind she will turn

She can state the case and then ignore the truth

When it ain't on her side

When her eyes claim that she's a lady

You better treat her as such

But comfort the little girl when her world gets too rough

If she

If she's the woman that you live for

Make her feel how much you need her

If she

If she's the woman that you love

In the moment that your lives touched

There was something in the stars

That made you feel you'd probably die

Just for a good morning in her arms

'Cause you knew you'd seen an angel

And you were sure she'd fly away

But she chose you when she landed

And gave her heart away
So she's your mystery trip into each new tomorrow
She's the first to laugh and she's the worst to cry
She's like the tide 'neath your ship
But all the fall and rise is just a call to dance
And she's always in time
And he love is like a river in a poem
Penned in wine
That takes you floating forever
Rhyme after rhyme
If she
If she's the woman that you live for
Make her feel how much you need her
If she
If she's the woman that you love
