"By Reason"

How much longer will it take to erode my one mistake I should have seen it loud and clear every grimace, every sneer all along I had my doubts but never stopped to call you out from behind your paper cell the lights are on but all's not well how long until the day these hands will hurt no more so much left to say just leave it all alone my god was i saved by reason or by scorn?

sinking further in the mud I heard you say you'e had enough something hangs out in the yard a broken man...who tried to hard I turned to look but found you gone I can't believe what you have done I watched the tears run down your face but never felt your fall from grace...

What kind price will you now pay to make the nightmares go away they follow you into the calm, there's no escape, something's wrong after all that we've been through I thought I could depend on you to bring your demons out to share their bellies full of all your cares...
