To be deceived in silence by a loneliness shared with a heart gone wrong it grows, speaking words made of stone beneath them chameleons squirm I thought you'd send your kiss to rescue me now I can't even decide in what to believe

I hope you find him, I hope he's real I hope you find him...before your love disappears to seek an act of kindness underneath the mask and the disguises worn they burn like memories lost lighting a path to her heart

I hope you're happy, I hope you heal I hope you wake up...before your love disappears to see the dreams inside her slowly turning to rust after another day she sings, but her words have become a tragic chameleon song i never thought she'd send her kiss to bury me
