last night I should have died to the hand of a best friend... he held a gun that was mine and said we'd meet some women in a hotel and left me there to die he stopped by my mothers house on his way home cried with her for an hour and left some money for my funeral he held my moms tight and said god bless his soul but guess what?

I didn't die

I guess you didn't expect to see me so soon pleading my absence to the dark side of the moon what about everything I helped you through? fuck that we were deeper more just like brothers you left me suffering in a hotel room bleeding and unconscious excepting that I met my doom and still you turned and I remember you the tears they burn there's no forgiving you I loved you like my own blood trusted you in my home was that not enough?
I know that times were rough but only together could we stay tough back to back is how we bust I remember when we were seventeen cornered in an alley way I sacrificed my parents van just to help us get away we almost died that day I'd give my life I'd say but for some money that we could have split you ride me and with some honeys major hit but like always didn't unload the clip it was your woman that helped me place this bid pick up your face you bitch your lucky that you have kids or I would fill you up with this lead while I was pistol whipping his head you stupid fool kill me you tried to prize from my demise now look who's in your eyes now look who's getting what its over!

never again
never again
you lost your one friend your only brother motherfucker
you know this rage came over me
