(Dwight Yoakam)

This much I know
She'll never come back to me
This much I know
She meant what she said
This much I know
It's taught me all about misery
I just learn kinds slow
This much I know

This much I feel
I should have reached out to her
This much I fell
I tried it too late
This much I feel
How empty the world can be
And so painfully real
This much I fell

I've had second thoughts about
Every reason
We let love slip away
From our lives
And there's no place left to look
That I don't see some Small reminder
Of all the chances
I just let go by

This much I need
To wake up once and find she's not gone
This much I need
Oh, but I'll never have
This much I need
Words to speak without missing her
Or just some new way to breathe
This much I need
