you bend
hello again you're kissing sidewalk cracks and when the night falls she crawls
and you take her back

getting dirty on your way to heaven never tasted quite like that she pulls your strings and you do things like a smiling cheshire cat and when you ride her into the sunset you might be wise to tie her down and make her your pet

she falls in love again with the man who's on her tongue but when you breathe she'll steal your breath and run

she can ride without you if she tried you think you're holding on to something you couldn't hold her even if you tried all her lies mean nothing to your ears
"she is mine, she is mine"

you freeze
she stares through you and you slip through her crack but when the night falls
