I see my forbidden fruit I am Adam and the snake seducing myself to eat the apple hanging ripe to take every day I see the tree and the apple bears my name if I were to take a little bit I shouldn't be to blame

I shouldn't be to blame for wanting what belongs to me 'cause ever since it grew I knew this was meant to be

I can do so as I please where's the owner of the tree it's been so long I've lost the fear of what he said to me
"keep you distance of my fruit it will never lead to good" but still I feel it calling out I really think I should

'cause I deserve my share I'll bet it's oh so sweet I'll bring it to my lips it's like when lovers meet

it's like when lovers meet a fire that will always burn so pluck it from the tree and reach the point of no return and so I finally take my bite but the taste is anything but sweet and it's filled with maggots to the core now I've had it I'm ashamed to see I don't want my apple anymore guess it wasn't really meant to be
