That summer came early for you As the first buds they flowered that year She swore we'd be blood lovers And she carved out that promise in years Now there's no sad stories No heartbreak years, no deceit As dawn after oncoming dawn Crossed the Blashaval fields

Out of the door of the church Where first we stood walking as one I heard the tongue of my people all around As they stood tall in the sun They gave us daughters They gave us rivers and roads All the streetlights of Greenock aglow The Clyde flowing home

So tonight we wait here in the world With what little faith we possess I can't settle now for the years The whole deal nothing less Clouds drift over the roof They're leaving the land Over the hills of Ahmore And the Orinsay strand

So who could have told us all this So come close and let's talk Cause it's out of the ether And into the aurora we walk Let's go down to the deep well of love Right to the end Till we love again

Should we love again
