Oh the winter came early this year
And the long nights to hold you, my dear
Through the great fall of snow that we know
Will bury us here

And my love, it keeps pulling me some
Toward the day, when the providence comes
And surrenders my dull heart
To the anvil that leaves me undone

I'll get lost, in the fog
I saw coming all along
And I'll bide my time
Drinking your good red wine

Oh tell me what I'm supposed to do
I'm still drunk and still dreaming of you
I keep pacing down main street
Just hoping that you'll get the news

And they just closed the road through the pass
But your love it didn't make it back
You'll find a rich field
That makes up for all that mine lacks

You got lost in the fog
You saw coming all along
But I'll bide my time
Drinking your good red wine

Oh, I tried to keep warm on my own
In the woods that we used to call home
With the flames of the fire that
Your undying embers had sown
Oh this snow, it may cover my boots
But this is all that I know how to do
I will run through the trees, across streams
Just looking for you

I'll get lost, in the fog
I saw coming all along

But I'll bide my time
Drinking your good red wine

Well I may get lost, in the fog
I saw coming all along
But I'll bide my time
Drinking your good red wine

Honey please bide your time
Drinking your good red wine
