

Tragically Hip, The "Goodnight Josephine"

I remember a girl on her cellphone surrounded by her friends eyes flickering she's trying to smother her smile in her hands Is it someone for us someone more worry-free someone who can say'
"leave the worrying about him to me Josephine"?

I remember you there in the last rays of light at diplomacy's end eyes flickering you're crying, "but , isnt this when the crimes begin?" when the people you want to don't and the people who do you don't believe do you Josephine?

I remember you there at the table surrounded by all the days plans eyes flickering you're trying to let a coffee cup warm your hands maybe we're born lost born to perseve but honey I'd walk into your painting until I reappeared as a speck of comet-tail dust a blue-green northern light flickering just in your eyes' deepest ravines goodnight goodnight Josephine
