Verse1:

I'm 24 - I'm learning to skateboard - I'm learning to wait for the love of my life and I'll settle for nothing less If there is more in life - then I cannot place it - found fear and I faced it Believe in the future and know this is not the end

Verse2:

I'm 25 - but dating much younger - the music my hunger
Can we have it all or will all of it slip away?
Have faith in my friends - but fear their decisions - surviving revisions
Believe that the forces protecting us still remain

PostVerse:

Are you moody cuz it's over and you can't find the time?
Time to look back into the past and be happy with what you find?
There's an answer to your question, there's a rhythm to your rhyme
Give you a penny for your thoughts and a dime for your time

PreChorus:

So you sit alone in your room, wondering where you went wrong
Are you happy with how you turned out? Are you happy with all you've done?

Chorus:

You're having a Quarter-Life Crisis, yeah you're half way to the hole You're having a Quarter-Life Crisis and you feel like you're getting old Another sun comes up and a sun goes down - it's time for another day
When the calendar's burned, all that you learned, you discovered along the way

Verse3:

I'm 24 - and my hair is thinning - think back to beginnings

Who would have thought way back then we would come so far

Though sometimes it seems - this spirit of bandhood - conflicts with my manhood

Believe that the ride does not end until I walk away
