I woke this morning deep in the earth
Laying bare with the granite and the moths
Up I clambered and I was met by the sun
It was then I saw you there, down on the street my love

You've come such a long way
With no one to comfort you
Or to tell you you're needed
You and I come from the same place
But if I were to call for you
What's there left to believe in?

So I signaled up to the high and crumbling moon
We've made it then, my love
Closed both my eyes and crawled under the sink
And as I dreamt I swear I felt you in my arms again

You've come such a long way
With no one to comfort you
Or to tell you you're needed
You and I come from the same place
But if I were to call for you
What's there left to believe in?

And the whole way looking down
Tore my heart and ripped my crown
I've been falling for you
I've been falling for you
I've been falling for you, love
What's there left to believe in?

You've come such a long way
With no one to comfort you
Or to tell you you're needed
You and I come from the same place
But if I were to call for you
What's there left to believe in?

Do you still need me at all?
You're all I've left to believe in.
