she raises from a single bed and confidentially says "good bye love" and dresses in a shirt he wore last night he always liked her in his clothes 'cause no one ever looked as vogue as her in green and no one ever felt so right as her at the beach
he only broke the tv 'cause she said i want something more
there's no more scrambling for the front door home he screams that she'll be back tonight and jokes how they always fight with no pants on she doesnt think its funny but they can wait and go for dinner takes she recoils
he tells himself there must be stressful times at work but laying in a single bed at night she wants something more
there's no more
there's no more
there's no more
there's no more
there's no more
