Christmas in NYC

Check your memory and you will find me there on a corner near Times Square even though we are not together it will be alright you can see me if you want too in your dreams tonight pulling the cork from the red smiling at what has been said alone, but together once more It is christmas in N.Y. and I wouldn't want to be be anywhere else
then right here in this city tonight I get the feeling I am not by myself

My watch has stopped at a quarter past one but the trains and the buses and the horses still run The greatest gift would be you here with me and visions of sugerplums in a concrete sea the bums go shuffling their feet looking for something to eat alone, but together once more

It can't be like this everywhere I think I'll just stop and stare I'm alone but somehow a part of it all

It's Christmas in New York, I get the feeling I'm not by myself.
