I shoulda kept my jacket on to protect me from this violent weather. Twist the knife a thousand times but I can't feel I'm made of leather. There's something else you never understood about me.....i'm at the wall. Defying all my laws of reason, high from the drug, I'm clever. Elastic nerves give the impression that i'm here forever. Alive in every corner of my mind, I stand tall.

It's real in my head, I feel it in my soul, you'll always be a part of me I know. And coast to coast I'll ride, knowing there's so much more that's inside. And it'll set me free.....

How many times did you think I would show you my pride? How many times did you think that I would swallow it down? In regard to your deceiving I'm receiving this reward. Relief from all the thoughts that always lingered on my head. Relief from all the messed up feelings when you're laying in my bed. I'm trading it all away for false security.....

I'll race out of control, basking in the light, of all that is ahead of me and I, will chase til I am weak. It's there for the taking.....
