"Miss Midnight"

Before you fall asleep on your old bed,
Remember when we said, we'll never get through it all,
But thank them both for the stereo.

And don't you leave things left this way,
There's no glory in going astray,
Stay with us though it's always,
The wrong side of midnight, my love.

Well now and then I need someone else,
When I can't slow down or get the rent in,
And you're still waiting on your payday,
Well if I find mine I'll send us all away.

And it's been a long, long time.
A long time, since you tugged my sleeve and said, Sleep's her only relief, ask yourself if she'd ever get through it all,
If it wasn't for her chemicals.

Well everybody needs someone else,
But you can't be there every minute.

Fall away.

Well everybody needs someone else,
But you can't be there every minute,
And let them yell, but let me tell you,
Life's too short for you to worry about it.
