

Working Title, The "Blind"

You bring your face to mine
Your anger wells inside
You speak your wasted mind
And mine is wasting,

You drag me deep inside
The depths of wide decline
And I could not prepare for the fall.

You're frozen, uncertain, empty inside
I've fallen so deep I can't see the light

I'm bleeding, my hands are cold
Someone save me
I've trusted what I can't see but everyone is blind

It took me so long to break the chains of time
Servant freedom comes from the inside
They could not see you tear apart everything
Such a small one you wanted love.

Dilated, frustrated, you can't get out
My fingers keep shaking it's all in vain.

I was born for this I swear
Strengthen me,
This is the part where I break down
On my knees,
Maybe the words have lost their shape
But I need you,
To paint the picture I can't see for...

We are blind
Can't you see
