

Zookeeper

"Two Part Invention"

Visit "Two Part Invention" on MotoLyrics.com

See how the chips fall where they may, how my lips sink ships, drift astray

How I've missed you, I've been a bad boy
But seventeen, it takes forever, and me

I was already on fire, dreaming with angels

Remember every little thing
You've got to remember every little thing...
My child, there, I know, I'm coming to get you, but oh

I'm running so slow, like a dream, and the dawn it is quickenning
My friends they all thought I was the one who was lost

I learned that irony from the start of my life
Remember every little thing
You've got to remember every little thing...
Trumpets peal, I've realized all that's real
And love is a white-golden road I pave with my blood now

I was a fraction at best, a sad king's court jester, or less
I was a two-part invention, she was my melody
God, she was my melody...

Visit Zookeeper page on MotoLyrics.com, to get more lyrics and videos.