Your keepsake box is
In the way of what I wanna read
I wish you'd move it
It's been that way since we were seventeen

You may not like me but you can't decide on that right now
And I don't remind you of anything
But if you want me to make myself scarce
Stop inviting

The work that you do
Precludes the time that you could spend alone
But it's not my fault
That you bought me in and gave me half your home

And now you cry and say your life is in the hands of someone
And I won't advise you on anything
But if you want me to make myself gone
Stop inviting

I think my time is valuable too
I know that it makes no difference to you
But It's not right that you can Rearrange and disengage me at all

The book I'm reading
Is a pop psychology I found under the desk
If you don't like it
You can keep that to yourself I think that's best

Because it's mine and I don't need to have a second opinion
Yeah, I won't deny you of anything
But if you want me to make myself leave
Stop inviting

Hey I wont remind you of anything
But if you want me to make myself scarce
Stop inviting, don't invite me
Stop inviting
