I wanted you last night and I dreamed of you and I dreamed of me
You were moving to the rhythm of my heartbeat when suddenly Broken was the spell and your loving smile buckled and fell
And you became the sad reflection of the need inside of me
And baby Im blind to you, baby youre blind to me
It aint each other that we really see
I was in half the way, love aint a halfway thing
And it took me years to break this chain

The first sign is never clear, you only want to believe in love
And wash your bodies clean with hope and trust
But all the way back home I worried so about myself Better find my way and find my wings and leave this shell
Cause baby Im blind to you, baby youre blind to me
It aint each other that we really see
I was in half the way, love aint a halfway thing
And it took me years to break this chain

So my hands became a way to reach my goal Cause when I touched you I swear I touched my soul
But aint this the well-known scene
The one where the maestro walks off stage
Because she doesnt know how to move anymore
Or read the score to her own play And away, Ive been hiding and sliding and striving softly away

The wooden frames of houses in a row, Christmas trees and every picture show
I can give so many reasons for not letting you go But every one comes back at me brandishing a weapon and aiming it in spite And suddenly its too obvious just what is wrong and what is right
Cause baby Im blind to you, baby youre blind to me

It aint each other that we really see
I was in half the way, love aint a halfway thing
And it took me years to break this chain
