Little seahorse
swimming in a primal sea heartbeat like a
leaf quaking in the breeze i feel magic as Coyote in the middle of the moon-wild night.

In the forge-fire time your mother glowed so bright you were like a voice calling in the night and i'm watching the curtain rising on a whole new set of dreams.

The world is waiting like a Lake Superior gale a locomotive
racing along the rail.
It'll sweep you away
but you know that you're never alone.

floating on a primal tide quickenning like a spark in a haystack side i already love you and i don't even know who you are. (Toronto 14/12/75)
