I left you lonely in a crowded room where the girls dance slowly two by two.
I thought you'd curl up and just fade away,
leaving me free to wonder in this tomb.

Why do you run from the light of the moon
as it shines in your eyes?
Where do you run, when there's no place to go,
Why do you hide, when I talk to you?

Why don't you kick off those wandering shoes,
lay your head under that waterfall.
Let it spill through your long silky hair,
flowing down your face along the lines that scrawl.

You deserve much more than this,
Why, you've been down and surely missed.
It seems you'd make a good candidate,
I only hope you can relate to the passing of the moon beams
as they glimmer in your eyes.

Why do you run from the light of the moon
as it shines in your eyes?
Where do you run, when there's no place to go?
Why do you hide, when I talk to you?
Why do you hide, when I talk to you?
Why do you hide from the Moon?
