My good companion, my old friend
May the angels sing hope in your ears again
I miss your voice in my kitchen at night
But I am done with losing sleep watching you lose your long dark fight

It's weary travel, and a cold road there are easier highways than the ones you choose to go I've lost the romance for wounds that don't heal I don't think we find our courage getting broken on the wheel

My good companion don't forget your prayers I'll ask a little of my hope to sneak up on you somewhere and offer a shoulder of sober, steady grace a little hope, my good companion, lights the angels to our face
