They say that hindsight is a virtue
But it's foresight that could truly save a soul
Because if I could have only looked forward and seen
Just what - what would become of us
And what you were capable of
I would've never let myself in for what was to come
I would've never been so weak

Now I swear, I can't wait for the day
When the smoke spells out your name
And then it's blown away!

Hold on to nothing
No chance of resolve

As the ice wore far too thin, I saw your reflection for one last time
And I knew that I'd never make that mistake again

So hollow, a selfish coward
Going back on all I tried so hard to redeem
Now alone, unforgiven
Will I ever learn to trust again?

What's left of what was once so perfect?
Nothing but an empty shell of a man

With no heart, no hope
No will, no words
No cure, no sense
No strength, no life
No love
But now I know what I must do

Believe in this reflection
And leave the woes of the past behind
Believe... in this reflection
And leave the woes of the past behind
Believe in this reflection
And leave the woes of the past behind
