To the Terrorist

I'm a poet, not a soldier.

I'm a lover, not a mercenary.

I seek freedom, not deliverance.

I see purpose, not irrationality.

But I will hunt you down - for what you've done to me.

Yes I will hunt you down - for what you've done to me.

In your face, a sea of darkness.

In your terror, infidelity.

Of a people, not religion.

Of a culture, not a nationality.

And I will hunt you down - for what you've done to me.

Yes I will hunt you down - for what you've done to me.

You hide in the shadows, I stand in the street.

But I'll stand for nothing, if I don't stand free.

Call it justice, or call it vengeance.

Call it hatred - it's all the same to me.

In the mountains, in the desert,

for my conscience, for my sanity

I will hunt you down - for what you've done to me.

Yes I will hunt you down - for what you've done to me.

You hide in the shadows, I stand in the street.

But I'll stand for nothing, if I don't stand free.
