Too little too late, his time has come and gone
Is that what they say when I walk by?
I've got a little more grey, my steps are slow and long
And the promise you've made fades in the moonlight

I see a star; You see the Milky Way
I see one man counting sand
But you see generations

Who, but You, would ever choose
To dream Your dream in me?
Tell me who, but You, would dare me to
Believe what I can't see
Who, but You?

You'd think by now, it wouldn't bother me
The hush from the crowd when I walk by
And you'd think somehow, I'd let my heart believe
It's time to let go of lullabies

I see a star; You see a galaxy
There's just one hope, just one way
These arms will not stay empty

Who, but You, would ever choose
To dream Your dream in me?
Tell me who, but You, would dare me to
Believe what I can't see
Who, but You?

So call me crazy, call me a fool
You alone can do the things You promised to
You are Yahweh, I'm just a man
I'm counting tiny grains of sand
Placing every promise in Your hand

Who, but You, would ever choose
To dream Your dream in me?
Tell me who, but You, would dare me to
Believe what I can't see
Who, but You? [x3]

Great and mighty God, I believe, I believe You
Keeper of the stars, I believe, I believe You
