On that fateful September morn, the Towers stood proud and tall
A symbol of our pride and strength, a symbol of us all Then one September morning with explosions in the sky
The Towers came tumbling down,

The city's skyline was defined by the Towers in the sky Folks below would always stop and stare Until that day, a mortal wound inflicted on their face
Yes the towers came tumbling down,

Fireman fought with faces charred from flames that swirled about Policeman with there faces dusty grey With a mighty roar and cloud of dust that shook the earth and sky
Yes the towers came tumbling down,

Bridge #1
The towers from their window shed their tears before they fell

Like leaves from autumn trees they floated down The gathered by their brothers they were gently put to rest
When the dust had settled down,

Goodbye to wife and husband and the children left behind Farewell to Mom and Dad, the end grows nigh Our time is spent, the voice grows faint, the end a tear and sigh
As the Towers came tumbling down,

The people in the Towers and their brethren in the sky Bid farewell with voices crackling through the air And then they jointly met their fate, like warriors from the past
As the planes came hurtling down,

Bridge #2

Their spirits rest within us and their memory always fresh

They will never be allowed to fade away

We will always face that evil that confronts us all around

Till that final Judgement Day,

(Repeat 1st Verse)
