As I lie awake in bed. A normal day I thought instead. I can't move or hear, what's going on? I can't think or see in front of me. Now I'm up against the wall. Holding on so I won't fall. Don't cry or hide. Try to rationalize. Why am I still alive?

I will not give up. I will not lay down. Let's stop pretending. The whole world is ending. When everything's wrong we must stand and scream out.

We will not give up. We will not lay down. No use pretending. The whole world is ending. When everything's gone we must stand and reach out.

I run outside and look around. Can barely start to hear the sounds. The cries and clouds of dust surround a silhouette of a man buried in the ground. In a daze I find you there with broken arms and bloody hair. Hold on my friend I won't let go. Stay here old friend until the end.

I will not give up. I will not lay down. Let's stop pretending. The whole world is ending. When everything's wrong we must stand and scream out.

We will not give up. We will not lay down. No use pretending. The whole world is ending. When everything's gone we must stand and reach out.

Here comes the water. Pray for each other. Here comes the water.
