(Don't wake up, let the sounds soothe you)
Faceless photographs and no recollection
A year lost in time, there is no explanation
Two strangers on a subway, smiling, we never kenw
The sunset over the Atlantic reminds me of a day I spent in the arms of a sillhouette
There's something wrong here
You look so familiar, you look so familiar
But looks can be so decieveing, here I am
I'm leaving again
We can try to pretend like we don't remember, but we don't remember, strangers once again
We smiled so politely and shook our hands goodbye, goodbye
You look so familiar, you look so familiar...
... how could you do this (erase everything)
How could you do this (just walk away)
How could you do this (I don't even know you)
How could you do this (you could have explained it)
How could you do this (you erased everything)...
... I thought I could love you, hold you and thank you for being the one...
... what happened? I woke up in the same bed, same clothes but something is missing, my love, my life, my memory, what happened last night? who was I with?
what happened?
You looked so familiar, you looked so familiar
I woke up this morning and part of me was missing but I don't know what
