"Why I Cry"

Down in Havasupai Falls
He picked me up and threw me in
And I can still recall
Life and its bash in the end
Then a hundred miles east
There's a cabin in my mind
Oh I could still feel the heat
From the first time firelight
Maybe that's why I cry

Right now all you're seeing are the good times
Don't forget girl why you told him goodbye
Every breakdown, every single time that he lied
Maybe that's why I... cry

At the end of a long runaway
Beneath the blanket of stars
We used to lie and watch the planes land
And in each other's arms

Then we'd both be flying out west
Little white chapel in my mind
We almost took that chance
That night under the Vegas lights
And maybe that's why I cry

Right now all you're seeing are the good times
Don't forget girl why you told him goodbye
Every breakdown, every single time that he lied
Maybe that's why

Right now all you're seeing are the good times
Don't forget girl why you told him goodbye
Every breakdown and every time that he lied
Maybe that's why I cry

Love's the reason
The season of a lifetime
Take a deep breath, walk out in the sunshine
Every step leaves him a little further behind
Maybe that's why I cry
