Some day in time we'll meet in the shade
Our love have grown in different ways
And we will scream the unsaid
Giving in to our dreams breaking down
Come apart and hit the ground
Shattering without a sound

Nothing's really new to you I guess
Whenever you leave I'm left with less
See it in your eyes, the way we've become so comfortably numb

I know there is a place for us both
A field of love, desire and hope
Where every song that we sing are the same
That got lost on the ground
Shattering without a sound
The bits and pieces all around
We pick them up to throw them down

Nothing's really new to you I guess
Whenever you leave I'm left with less
Nothing's really new to you my friend
Whenever you leave I'm left again
See it in your eyes, the way we've become so
comfortably numb

Nothing's really new to you I guess
Whenever you leave I'm left with less
See it in your eyes, the way we've become so
comfortably numb
