Find a place in line, weÂ're marching straight into the fire

With our free will manifesto on our sleeves.

Would you turn a blind eye to the freedom that surrounds usÂ...

Could you radiate the love that burns insideÂ...

As this is how we survive, in accordance to the beauty that we find.

DonÂ't let this fire burn out, and donÂ't let me forget that IÂ'm alive.

Because I will, as we all do,

We spend all our time trying to predict the next revolution,

Just to miss the chance that this might be it.

DonÂ't let me forget that this is not a race that weÂ're in.

I keep getting caught up in predictions of future events.

Because I will

Get distracted by the lights,

And wake up to the darkest night.

(Because I will)

Forget everything IÂ've learned,

Neglect every true concern.

()

Keep you at an arms length,

Laugh off every compliment.

()

Dismiss all the mystery,

And disregard my history.

()

Take back every word I said,

Evacuate my tired head,

()

Misjudge all my distances,

And take the path of least resistance,

()

Break my silence just to say that this is not some kind of race,

I know that you would do the same
