

A Northern Chorus

"This Open Heart"

The poems strewn
Across the floor
They're out of tune
With every chord
And one reads 'lay down
Inside this open heart'

And where's this heart of which it speaks?
It must be soaring skies revealed
For it's been fooled for the last time
Or so it would seem
And I can't lay down
Inside this open heart
With these crazed eyes
Of aftermath

Tell me what happens when the planets align?
Will torrid skies collapse our hearts?
Will jealous moons come crashing down
Into the ocean floor?

For it's been fooled for the last time
Or so it would seem
And it's been fooled for the last time
Or so it would seem
