Kevin Paris
"Loneliness"

Visit "Loneliness" on MotoLyrics.com

Well I went out walking, but ended up talking to you While asking your name, I watched all your pain seeping through

I asked, "why were you crying?... there's no need for lying to me"
She said that there's nothing wrong, I said that something must be…

She said, but you're just a stranger, you don't need my anger or blues I said, but we all need a hand, when we're standing on glass with no shoes.

So she said "I'm tired of this loneliness, hiding out deep in my bones.
My mind is a mess and my heart is a handful of stepped on stones

Chorus:
It's been too long Every evening, every dawn Loneliness comes upon me

And it's grown so old, all this emptiness, all this cold
I'm not digging for sympathy or begging for gold
I just want someone to hold

But after a while, she managed to smile and she said Well look at me now, you would've thought all my happiness fled

She said, "you're also human, you've been through loneliness too" I said, "darling, the words that you speak, you know they are true"

I said, "but the sun always rises, and the spring always comes when it's time."
She said, "it takes light to see shadows, it takes pain to see love truly shineâ€ â€œAnd you can wade through the waters and climb all the towers in town,â€ She said, â€œbut love isnâ€™t something you find when youâ€™re looking aroundâ€¦â€

CHORUS

So I wait
Through this tiring, lonely fate
Hoping tomorrow itâ€™s changed when I wake

CHORUS