Baby, come back there in town,
The snow's just comin' down.
Happiness is a big fire burning bright
And seems you still got your first flame to light.

You tried to throw away all their lies,
But remember, everything got a prize.
Girl you can't mind what they say
While you care how your dreams are about to fray.

There's no reason to knock down yourself,
We'll be there withstanding 'till the end,
Takin' another chance for joy to stand.
Winter doesn't give what we pretend
If our dreams blow through the summer sand.

And when those echoes arrive
From the holes we realize it's hard to survive,
And way we laugh is so delicious
When life makes those glares something precious.

Sometimes it feels like a dark cloud
And stormy winds born to upset your soul,
But I've seen hope breaks runnin' deep,
Even when drops were drownin' your creed.

There's no reason to knock down yourself,
We'll be there withstanding 'till the end,
Takin' another chance for joy to stand.
Winter doesn't give what we pretend
If our dreams blow through the summer sand

There's no reason to knock down yourself,
Words and life got no meaning
But the one we give them to.
Never wonder who you are,
But who can come out of you.
