The passage of time
is flicking dimly upon the screen
I can't see the lines
I used to think I could read between Perhaps my brains have turned to sand

Loan me your mind
I think it's been an eternity
You'd be surprised at my degree of uncertainty
How can moments go so slow

Several times
I've seen the evening slide away
Watching the signs taking over from the fading day
Perhaps my brains are old and scrambled

Several times
I've seen the evening slide away
Watching the signs taking over from the fading day
Changing water into wine

Several times
I've seen the evening slide away
Watching the signs taking over from the fading day
Putting grapes back on the vine
