I used to float six inches off the ground

I was too weightless to ever be hurt

And I never knew the truth about untrue

Until I saw you in his shirt

It's always small things that break you open

They're the only things sharp enough

The soft goodbye brush of your hand upon my face

Your world exploding touch

It's a secret

That I was never told

Love's a cruel firework

Love is to burn 'til you're cold

CHORUS

Now I know how you feel when you feel too much

And I know what it means when you mean too much

And I know how you taste when you taste too much

I feel your world exploding touch

And yes I know nobody lives forever

And some day soon we'll all be gone

But I think I'll recognise your touch in disguise

When that day wanders along

So don't keep secrets

This life is too hot and too short

Love is outlaws

Love is to steal 'til you're caught

And this bedroom door that hangs forlornly open

And the sheets upon the bed that I won't make

And the soft morning light that tells me

There's no point in fighting for you

One touch is all you're going to let me take

They say that you will never be a writer

Until you find something that you can believe in

Well I believe

I believe in you

You win
