I guess I had no reason, talking to you that way

It's just so unexpected, seeing you here today

Why now? Has it been long enough, for all the hurt to fade

Oh, How I'm waiting for the Day

I guess I have no business, asking who you're hanging around

You like to keep your secrets, it's a lesson I've learnt now

But don't act like I feel nothing for you, and everything's OK

Oh, how I'm waiting for the Day

Seems that you've been kind enough, to spare my innocence

And let me keep my illusions safe from harm

To think when friends revealed the truth I'd leap to your defence

Strange the way the cruellest cuts have come

It's late I guess I'll be going, but don't expect me to wish you well

There's too much gone between us, whatever's left now I can't tell

But I know, there'll be a time when I won't crumble like today

No I, won't feel like screaming out should I see you glance my way

Yes I might find some bright new future that you can't steal away

Oh, how I'm waiting for The Day

Oh, how I'm waiting for The Day

(ad lib lick)

Oh, how I'm waiting for The Day
