Honey bee, honey bee,
friend of a cheater
don't touch my feet
with your cool, cool smooth whiskers

I know a cool, cool smooth gardener Krishna...

Honey bee, honey bee,
why are you singing
the glories of one who has long since left?

We gave up our own homes to be with him always so please go and sing your song (ooh) of (?)

After making us drink the nectar of his enchanting lips only once Krishna suddenly abandoned us and left us here alone all these months

Honey bee, honey bee,
I know what you're doing You've learned to (??) so well and now you're reciting his flattering phrases

Honey bee, honey bee,
why should we love him?
He abandoned our husbands (?)

This dark-skinned boy is simply ungrateful
How can I forgive him?

So let us give a ??
with this selfish young boy forever

Even if we can't give up talking about him whenever we let him (?)

when I hear
it is nothing for my ears
those who take a single drop
the material life is up

now that I am feeling pain
please don't say his name again

Oh honeybee
please leave me
I don't want to hear
Lord Krishna anymore

Honey bee, honey bee,
friend of my dear one
Has my beloved sent you here again?
Why should ? whatever ? you desire?

Honey bee, honey bee,
why have you come back?
To take us to him
who's so hard to renounce?

He who is consort
with the goddess of fortune
My (?) god, my (?)
I pray you (?)

This singer seems to trail off at the ends of phrases. This is all I can make of the words.

There seems to be quite a bit in common with this passage, which you may want to read if you are not already familiar with it:
