Shards of broken pieces shattered on the floor its not enough to bleed tears and angry voices cracks around the door

no apologies

and every time you say you love me I just have to stop and catch my breath how could somebody love something like me if you could only say your sorry there is nothing in this world I can't forget waiting here for you to set me free toys and colored pencils scattered on the floor underneath my feet

you're always crying over nothing you're always wanting more you never go to sleep

but every time you say you love me
and every time I feel im falling she'll be there to save me from myself little angel watching over me the taxi's in the driveway my bags are at the door and it still kills me to leave

but every time you say you love me
your the one's that saved me from myself you give me something to believe and with you here

these cracks and tears
they fade away
