When the street signs point the way
Down roads you never knew
And I'm singing to the soundtrack of A different side of you

One star for your past
Three stars for what's next Five stars when your head comes out of your ass
It's hard to hold on, but you're losing grip
Is this what you wanted?

Will there ever be a day when you look to the ground
for the last time singing
I won't let myself go?
And will there ever come a time when your head's in
the clouds
Up up shouting
Now the world's my home?

An anthem to forgetting Everything's been broken once or twice
I hope you're given the world
So lift your head up to the clouds and sing
Woah, woah
Here's to forgetting what you've done

Will there ever be a day when you look to the ground
for the last time singing
I won't let myself go?
And will there ever come a time when your head's in
the clouds
Up up shouting
Now the world's my home?

When the bright lights point the way
To dreams you've never dreamt before
You can't ignore

That every dream wasted is another mistake
And if it's all up to you, then they could give what you take

Are you sick of doubting what you see?
Why do we all believe in bad dreams?

If you were one step closer to the answers that you've pictured in your head
The stars could be the air that you breathe
And I won't let this end

(Will there ever be a day when you look to the ground
for the last time singing?)

Will there ever be a day when you look to the ground
for the last time singing
I won't let myself go?
And will there ever come a time when your head's in
the clouds
Up up shouting
Now the world's my home?

So lift your head up to the clouds and sing woah, woah
Here's to forgetting what you've done
(Here's to forgetting what you've done)
So lift your head up to the clouds and sing woah, woah
Here's to forgetting what you've done
