The earth it quaked
The mountains they cried out
The waves they crashed in
Tearing the coast apart
The sun faded
The moon was replaced with red glow

And I didn't notice that it all was wrong
My eyes were closed I held them there too long
And if I had the chance to I'd go back
To take the time to regrow what I lack
What I lack

The streams stop to flow
Bringing things that belong back at home
The fields they burn
Before they are put out by the ash
The wind it is still a stark difference to all that remains

And I didn't notice that it all was wrong
My eyes were closed I held them there too long
And if I had the chance to I'd go back
To take the time to regrow what I lack
What I lack

And I didn't notice that it all was wrong
My eyes were closed I held them there too long
And if I had the chance to I'd go back
To take the time to regrow what I lack
And if I had the chance to I'd go back
To take the time to regrow what I lack
What I lack
