The mountain wind, it talks to me, I hear it deep within my soul,
It brings to me a peace of mind I'd otherwise never know.

There are times when I get lonesome and I wish to be back home,
But most the time I'd rather be in the mountains
where I roam.

Way up on the mountain I can sit there quietly,
No worries on my mind and nowhere for me to be.
I forget all my struggles and I leave my troubles be,
I just look out over the towering hills and I let myself be free.

I prefer to be with the trees when the cold wind blows,
I enjoy the peace and tranquility of the winter snows.
The big city, it just ain't for me with its glowing windows.
You'll find me living wild and free where no one
else goes.

Way up on the mountain sitting by a stream,
I watch the water falling and I let my mind dream.
I dream about the things to come and the life I want to lead,
It's all how it ought to be in the mountains by a stream.

I prefer to be with the trees when the cold wind blows,
I enjoy the peace and tranquility of the winter snows.
The big city, it just ain't for me with its glowing
windows.
You'll find me living wild and free where no one
else goes.

Way up on the mountain sitting by a fire,
I watch the embers glowing as the day expires.
The flames they tell a story with a life that never tires,
I could sit and stare for hours in the mountains by a fire.

I prefer to be with the trees when the cold wind blows,
I enjoy the peace and tranquility of the winter snows.
The big city, it just ain't for me with its glowin'
windows.
You'll find me livin' wild and free where no one
else goes.

Yea, you'll find me livin' wild and free where no one else goes.
