Out of deep space light-years from home Someday we'll see They're not alone

They fall from a universe not made for this land We've lost the only word they do understand They think we're the aliens invented on Mars

In their science fiction books They call us - the Planet with the cold and lonely heart

Sail on the river of a starry night From the Milky Way to another day

I'm waiting out somewhere at the borderline I don't want to stay - take me far away

They listen Â"Radio EarthÂ" every night and day This unspecific art in the words we say They wander through the tides from a parallel world

And found with decipher codes The thing we've lost

To send us an invasion of the love

Radio Earth Radio Earth

Sail on the river of a starry night From the Milky Way to another day I'm waiting out somewhere at the borderline
