You say that I look pale and try to get me convinced That when I get up in the morning I'm still staring at drinks
But these nights are beautiful and we're just melting away
And all the bag ladies and bums are dressing up for the day

We don't need these drinks but we share them for fun
We're almost sobering up but the wanna get drunk Cause the last train of the night just left and we weren't there
We need a black cab right now but we don't really care

So shut up now darling
I think this avenue could be our substitute for 7th St
And the forecast is sunshine that'll last for our whole lives
So get in, I'll take you out. You can sleep in the backseat
The city's asleep and the stores are all closed And we don't care if it's cheating 'cause we don't wanna know
And we won't fall in love
So shake off those habits now and leave in the morning
