I remember the bad days,
When your back breaks,
I'll be your backbone.
So you know you're not alone in this
Were just too close.

And now as your throat lumps,
These goose bumps,
Are unwelcome guests.
Put your heart back in your chest.
Well be able to clean up this mess.

And your lack of sleep is scaring me!
Half to death.
Because you know I'm uncomfortable with that.

I don't know if you realize,
What's in your veins, is in mine.

This place is a mess.
Take cover and sever the ends.
From your confident bones.
Down to this hospital bed.

We do what we can,
In times of panic and stress.
I know you'd rather be home
And safe in your bed.

There's only so much a person can do
While waiting outside of a hospital room
Other than praying and hoping it'll come true
See I call them as I see them and I mean this honestly
But once I get a few drinks inside of me
Don't mind my honesty
And while I'm free to say whatever's on my mind
Did you know that I was sorry and that I miss you all the time...
No you don't but given the chance to see if I could make things right, I'll try.

(Am I the one youve been looking for?
Because I'm just about ready to give in.
To give in!)

Don't you wish you had a boy to make you smile?
Don't you wish you had a boy to make you shake?
Don't you wish you had a boy to make the difference?
Don't you wish that you had me?

Don't you wish you had a boy to bring you flowers?
(You should treat this like a secret
And tell all your friends just what I said.)
Don't you wish you had a boy to watch you sleep?
Don't you wish you had a boy to make you anxious?
(You should treat this like a secret
And tell all your friends just what I said.)
Don't you wish that you had me?

Don't you wish you had a boy to make you smile?
(You should treat this like a secret
And tell all your friends just what I said.)
Don't you wish you had a boy to make you shake?
Don't you wish you had a boy to make the difference?
(You should treat this like a secret
And tell all your friends just what I said.)
Don't you wish that you had me?
