I climb, the steps, straight into judgment day,
The wind, pick up, it cuts me like a blade,
I try, so hard, to leave it in the past,
I'm left to blame, for my revenge attempt,
Your eyes, in fear, while biting on the curb,
Things all, speed up, I'm speaking in a slur...
They say we're all the same, I won't compare to them...
I see, the way, they all look at me,
They have, to make, decisions based on me,
And yet, they don't, even know who I am,
And here, I stand, without a reasonable,
Cause, let, me, go, suffer, repent...
They say we're all the same, I won't compare to them...
Now I sit and wait for them, to determine,
My fate lies in their own hands, please find me mercy...
Condemn tonight, an innocent man,
This isn't right, an innocent man,
This isn't right, Now I sit and wait
